Hey guys!

I'm blitzing you in particular because there's a new issue that's come up. It turns out that Dean Scherr has just asked DAMELL to consider whether or not they'd accept a visiting professor position for Korean Languages. NOW is the time to be meeting these DAMELL profs. DAMELL is going to be making a decision about this really soon and we're in a powerful position right now to make things go our way.

You guys getting this blitz are all assigned to one or more DAMELL prof. If you have not made an appointment with your prof, I cannot stress how important it is that you do so, and make sure to see them either today or on Monday. If you cannot reach them by blitz, try dropping by informally. Professors don't mind that and if you're polite they can't turn you away! In some ways, dropping in informally might be a more effective tool. In any case, dropping by this afternoon will be a lot more effective than dropping by after these professors have already made their decision not to support this visiting position.

IMPORTANT: These profs don't need to know that you know that they have to decide on Scherr's proposal. We don't want to seem menacing or threatening. Instead, just express how disappointed you are that Korean is not happening. Remember, be polite! Even though you might be boiling inside at the way our people have been repressed in the academic community for billions of years, look nice, smile, comment on the wallpaper. Don't bare your fangs.

If for some reason you cannot spare 20 minutes to meet with your assigned profs, please let me know ASAP, I will try to get to them myself.

Those of you who have seen your profs (I think those profs are Mowry, Hockley, Rege, Washburn and Dorsey), thank you so much for moving quickly on this. The rest of you--I hope and expect to hear about your progress by this afternoon--just let me know if you've set up an appointment, seen your professor, or have contacted them. That's all for now, guys, but I guess this is the big push. Let's get pumped and get moving on this!!!

Thanks a lot!

Yoona
